MRS. CONKLIN WILL CONTRADICT GOLDER

Mother of Mrs. Carman to Go on Stand—Detectives Brought to Make Search for Gun.

Freeport, Long Island, July 4.—District Attorney Lewis J. Smith of Nassau County said late to-night that he is now centering his investigation of the murder of Mrs. Louise Bailey on four persons—a man and three women, the latter patients of Dr. Edwin Carman. All live near Freeport, one of the women being a resident of Hempstead. Mr. Smith said that detectives are tracing the movements of the four on the night of the murder and their association with Dr. Carman.

"May it be assumed?" he was asked, "that these women called Dr. Carman to attend them professionally when they really did not need him because they were fond of him?" "That is a natural inference," he admitted. At midnight Mr. Smith suddenly sent word to have a guard of county detectives placed around the Carman residence. The house was guarded until this morning by Freeport police, who were then withdrawn, and no surveillance was kept until the county police were sent there to-night. Mr. Smith refused to explain his action. A squad of Freeport police was sent to guard the house until the arrival of the county detectives.

Among those whose relations with the doctor are being investigated are two women, described as "pretty, extensively dressed and under twenty-five years of age." Archie Post, George Golder, Mrs. Edwin Carman, Mrs. Ida Powell and others have testified that these two women, whom no one ever seems to have seen before, were in the ante-room of Dr. Carman's office the night of the shooting, and hurried out of the house immediately after the fatal shot was fired.

Expect Important Testimony.

Their testimony in the case is expected to be of great importance. They are wanted either to substantiate or deny Golder's positive statement that Mrs. Carman passed through the lower part of the house five minutes before Mrs. Bailey's murder, a statement which Dr. Carman for the first time yesterday took occasion to characterize as a "lie."

The lad was William Lannigan, fifteen, of 107 Fourth av., Manhattan. He was riding so slowly behind the procession that his bicycle was unsteady. As Mr. Belmont's machine, travelling in the same direction, started to pass the lad, it overtook a little and the mud-guard of the car struck him, knocking him to the roadway.

Martin Mills, of Rockville, Conn., were at luncheon in the Mulberry st. cafe of the Heublein Hotel to-day, a .32-calibre bullet, presumably fired by a crank who had come crashing through the half-opened window and lodged in the coat pocket of Louis Meisner, the waiter, who was placing a course on Hannford's table.

NO LIFE MASK OF BRYAN He Barked at Sitting Still and Breathing Through Quills.

Washington, July 4.—No life mask of Secretary Bryan is likely to be made according to a story told in artistic circles in Washington in the last week. Emory Garrett, the artist, who made death masks of Pope Leo XIII and many distinguished dead of America and Europe, desired to obtain such a representation of Secretary Bryan. Garrett was personally acquainted with the Secretary of State and enlisted the help of a friend who did know him. Mr. Bryan's secretary was told that the subject was placed in a chair similar to a barber's chair and his face covered with a soap plaster, which required eight or ten minutes to "set," during which time, to permit breathing, quills were inserted in the subject's nostrils.

Philadelphia, July 4.—President Wilson was the central figure in a national celebration of the 138th birthday anniversary of American independence today. In this environment, harking back to the birth of the nation's liberty, surrounded by historic relics of 1776, with the table on which the Declaration of Independence was signed before him, and a pitcher once used by George Washington at his hand, the President arose from a chair used by John Hancock amid tremendous applause. He touched in a general way upon the foreign policy of the United States, including the Mexican situation, the Panama tolls questions and other subjects.

Independence Square was jammed with people. On the platform with the President were representatives of the original thirteen states and nearly every patriotic organization in the country. The applause was frequent and enthusiastic, and the streets from the railroad station to the scene of the celebration were lined with people, while the buildings were decorated with American flags.

Greeted Slain Sailor's Mother.

Before the President got his speech well under way the crowd surged forward in such confusion that a panic was threatened. Two companies of marines and sailors stood before the speakers' stand, and Mr. Wilson was forced to stop several times, but finally got the crowd under control. "Liberty does not consist in trying to get a front seat," he said, with a smile, at one point.

Tarrytown Reprisal Plan Feared—Berkman Cool at Police Inquiry—Firemen Search Ruins for Missing Anarchist.

Three persons are known to be dead, a fourth is missing, probably blown into bits, and more than twenty were injured, when an anarchist bomb, carelessly handled, blew up yesterday morning on the top floor of a six story tenement house at 1626 Lexington av., between 102d and 103d sts. The police believe that the I. W. W. leaders, two of whom were killed, were preparing explosives to be used in the war they have been waging against the Rockefellers in Tarrytown during the last two months, and in revenge for the rough treatment Alexander Berkman, Becky Edelson and others of the organization had received when they last appeared near the country home of John D. Rockefeller. The angry townspeople dragged them in the mud and bombarded them with rotten eggs, stones and dirt, and the I. W. W.'s threatened reprisals.
